

What is the time line?

BPA has not made any final decision about building the line or where it might be built. Extensive study and analysis are required by law before the final decision is made. The draft environmental impact statement is scheduled for release in 2011, after which another round of public meetings and public comment will be conducted before BPA finalizes the EIS and makes a decision. If BPA decides to proceed with a new line after the environmental review is complete, construction could begin in 2013 with completion as early as 2015.
